Halal Certification from a recognized Halal Certifying Body is the pre-requisite for entering into the Halal Market specially meat market. As there are no internationally harmonized Halal Standards so there is no internationally recognized Halal Accreditation Body whose accreditation is acceptable to all Muslim countries. All Muslim countries have their own Halal Accreditation Bodies. Some major Halal importing countries like Saudi Arabia and Malaysia have specific Halal Certification Requirements and only accept those Halal imports specially meat consignments with their own recognized Halal Certification.

Halal Certification Requirement for Exports to Saudi Arabia:

Saudi Arabia has changed its Halal Certification Requirement for Meat, poultry and its by-product's exports to Saudi Arabia. According to the new requirement only those consignments would be acceptable which have Halal Certification from Halal Certifying Body with Saudi Food and Drug Authority (SFDA).

Halal Certification Requirement for Exports to Malaysia:

For Halal Exports to Malaysia, Halal Certification is required from JAKIM (Department of Islamic Development Malaysia) recognized Halal Certifying Body.
